

Web master,

I have included all support files needed to create the ACA website. I have included all photos as jpgs, fonts, logos, and a couple templates, as well as the initial layouts for direction. As I have stated earlier- I am not a web designer. I am a print designer. I am NOT familiar with setting up websites, the many limitations, or details such as which font sizes work best -so please excuse my lack of knowledge. I am hoping you will be able to provide the expertise needed to create and maintain this site.

I have supplied you with initial pdfs as a guide to setting up the site. I have included 2 psd files that are sort of templates- one of the home page, the other a typical page. Please see my notes in the pdf for animation direction. Was thinking the three lines of type would come in from the sides, in the same directions the arrows are pointing and end up where they are in the file. Each of the 12 spots on the homepage, need some sort of motion.

I know this is just phase one, and all sections of the site will not be developed for awhile. But I was thinking that you could put them in now, for place holders, and create the links. When you go to the links, it would say its under development.

Do you what you need to do to complete this site, keeping in mind my initial thoughts and layouts. If you need anything else, or have any questions, please contact me. Unfortunately, I will be out the office 7/3-7/6.

Thanks,
Jackie Tokarz
